8. Soumya is posted as Municipal Commissioner in a metropolitan city which has a chronic problem of slum proliferation. These slums are generally criticised for having unhygienic conditions. They are also despised by other residents as a breeding ground for diseases and anti-social elements. There is an increasing pressure on Soumya to remove slums and rehabilitate the people living there in outer areas. When Soumya started to work towards the slum rehabilitation and visited the places and interacted with people she found that the livelihood of slum people depends on nearby areas. If removed from there, they might not be able to earn two meals a day and would suffer immensely.

- (a) What are the ethical issues involved in the present case?
- (b) What are the options available to Soumya?
- (c) Evaluate each option on its possible consequences.
- (d) What will be the best course of action for Soumya?

9. In a state where the sale and consumption of alcohol was recently prohibited, bootlegging has become very common and country-made liquor is finding its way to the people easily. Not only is this in violation of the law, it also causes fatal medical complications. Already, over a dozen people have died after consuming spurious liquor.

A local Minister has called a press conference in his constituency to assure the people that the government is taking all possible measures to ensure a clampdown on bootlegging. During the interaction with the media, a few journalists ask the Minister some tough questions and claim that this indicates the failure of the state machinery.

The flustered Minister responds by pinning the blame on the concerned Superintendent of Police) who is sharing the platform with him. He publicly rebukes the S.P. for not being able to control the menace and even claims that the police are hand-in-glove with the bootleggers. In these circumstances, what should the S.P. do? Some options are given below:

(a) Challenge the Minister's allegations with facts regarding the number of arrests made in this connection, the number of illicit manufacturing facilities closed, etc.

(b) Do not dignify the Minister's remarks with a reply and quietly leave the press conference.

(c) Counter-question the Minister by asking him what he himself has done to curb this menace.

(d) Evaluate the merits and demerits of these options. Also, state what your advice to the S.P. in this matter would be.

11. Miss Y is a dedicated employee in a government office working as a supervisor. She supervises a very significant and vast infrastructure project. The project concerns building a bridge over a river that would connect a major rural area with the nearby towns and cities. It is a prestigious project launched by the government and has been marked as the government's flagship project. The date of inauguration has also been declared. The project has brought a lot of positivity and faith among the people towards the credibility of the government and concerned administration bodies involved in the project. Just a fortnight prior to the inauguration of the bridge, she discovers that the materials used in the construction of the bridge is of inferior quality than stated at the time of award of the contract. The bridge may not be able to bear the load of the traffic that would be crossing it on a regular and continuous basis. The region often sees trucks being overloaded with materials. and it is likely that overloaded trucks may harm the bridge's structural security. The inauguration cannot be cancelled nor can be postponed due to obvious reasons. But the inauguration and the subsequent usage of the bridge signal an impending danger: the collapse of the bridge.

(a) What are the ethical and administrative issues involved in the above case?

(b) What options are available to Miss Y. Evaluate each of these options and suggest the course of action, you would adopt, giving suitable reasons.

(c) As a Civil Servant, what would you suggest to avoid such situations?

12. A corporation wants to set up a pharmaceutical factory in a rural area. Once established, the factory will generate employment and business opportunities for the region. However, establishing the factory will require the State to acquire public land and transfer its ownership to the company.

The people in the region are excited about this project, sensing untold opportunities. They know that they will receive fair compensation for their land and get jobs in this factory.

You are a local journalist and are apprehensive that most people will squander the money they receive from the sale of land very soon. Moreover, the factory will require skilled labour but most of the people here have no such skill sets. Most importantly, you feel that the company may soon dominate and pollute the natural resources of the region such as waterbodies, open spaces, parks, etc.

How will you ensure that development does not turn into exploitation? Enumerate the agencies you would approach and the suggestions you would make to each of them.
